Part of what makes one community unique from any other is its history. There is no better way to reflect history than to preserve the unique properties and places that are the physical components of that history. As stated in New York State’s Historic Preservation Plan: “Historic and cultural resources tell the story of the community’s development, stimulate community pride and reflection, and provide visual cues about the community’s previous investments of capital, human resources and raw materials.”

The City of Elmira is fortunate to have two locally-designated historic districts within its boundaries, the Near Westside Historic District and the Elmira Civic Historic District which are both shown on the map below.

The Near Westside Historic District
“The Near Westside Historic District is significant as a concentration of fine 19th and early 20th century architecture and for its association with Elmira’s historical development. The variety of architectural styles reflect the continued growth of the area and is a distinctive feature of the district. This richness of detail, the juxtaposition of styles, and the remarkable integrity of the structures result in a distinctive historic ambience.”

The Elmira Civic Historic District
“All the major architectural styles of the 19th and early 20th centuries are represented in the Elmira Civic Historic District, a clear reflection of Elmira’s development during that period. A tiny landing on a swampy river in 1800, Elmira was the most important city in New York’s Southern Tier by the end of the century. With this growth came the wealth and sophisticated tastes that are reflected in the fashionable residential, commercial and civic buildings of the historic district.”

Historic Review Process

The local designation of sites and historic districts sets in motion a review process focused only on proposed changes to a building’s exterior. The purpose is to ensure the preservation of the architectural integrity of the designated building and the historic and cultural character of the site and/or district. In many cases, the commission can assist a property owner to find solutions to the challenges of working with historic buildings. If approved, the work receives a permit which is called a Certificate of Appropriateness (COA), described in detail below. A copy of the City’s Zoning Ordinance, which contains the laws regarding the Historic Preservation Commission and the Historic Review Process, can be found on the City’s website at: www.cityofelmira.net.

What is a Certificate of Appropriateness?

A COA is a permit to allow the construction, alteration, or demolition of any property that has been individually listed at the local level, or is located within a local historic district. It is required.

To receive a COA, an application is first filed with the City’s Division of Inspection Services. The department reviews for compliance all City and State codes, rules and regulations and will then refer the COA application to the Historic Preservation Commission for a Historic Review. The Commission meets twice a month and applications received will be reviewed at the bi-monthly meeting. The Commission will approve, deny, or approve with modifications within 30 days from the receipt of the complete application. Approvals are filed with the Elmira City Clerk’s Office and expire 12 months from the date of the filing.

Additional information can be found on the City of Elmira’s website at www.cityofelmira.net.

What Kind of Work Requires a COA?

Any alteration, restoration, construction, relocation or demolition of a structure that has been listed individually on the City Register of Historic Places and/or is located within a locally-designated historic district must be reviewed by the City’s Division of Inspection Services and the Historic Preservation Commission prior to issuing a permit or a COA. This shall also include:

- New construction for residential and commercial buildings or outbuildings such as garages or sheds
- Reconstruction or moving of a building
- Additions to buildings
- Alterations of buildings including replacement of doors, windows and changes to exterior siding
- Repairs to or removal of exterior details
- Demolition of buildings or any portion thereof
- Signs for residential or commercial use
- Erection of fences and exterior lighting

What Kind of Work Does Not Require a COA?

A COA is not required for the following:

- Electric, plumbing, heating and ventilation systems, provided they do not affect the exterior of the structure
- Painting
- Repair or partial replacement of porches, cornices, exterior, siding, doors, balustrades, stair or trim when the repair or replacement matches existing material and form
- Caulking, weather-stripping, glazing and repainting of windows
- Repair, replacement or installation of storm windows, provided they match the shape and size of historic windows and the meeting rail matches with the historic window—the color should match trim.
- Installation of new window jamb or jamb lines
- Repair or renovation of windows when work closely matches existing materials and form
- Repair, replacement or installation of gutters and downspouts
- Installation of replacement where siding or trim is not altered or damaged
- Replacement of non-significant flat stock trim
- Repair or replacement of existing roads, driveways, sidewalks and curbs, provided that the work results in minimal changes in dimensions or configuration
- Exterior lead paint abatement that includes scraping and repainting of exterior work and masonry surfaces
- Repair or replacement of fencing when work closely matches existing
- Repair or replacement of water, gas, storm and sewer lines
- Emergency repairs necessitated by a casualty to the property due to fire, storm, or flood
